
BLIND, DEAF FAVOR SEPARATES SCHOOL

STAUNTON (AP)—A majority of the blind and deaf persons in Virginia favor establishment of a separate school for the blind at Charlottesville, Reuben L. Altizer of Arlington said here.

Altizer, president of the Virginia Association of the Deaf, spoke Saturday at the homecoming program of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind here.

"Not a single recognized authority in this field of education is in favor of the continuance of our dual school," Altizer said.

He was one of a group that appeared recently before the Governor's Budget Advisory Committee in Richmond to urge appropriation of funds to begin construction of a separate school for the blind.
